PH Ambassador to Ireland visits Boracay

BORACAY – Philippine Ambassador to Ireland Ariel Y. Abadilla is here in Boracay, exploring the country’s top tourist spot with several Irish visitors.

Abadilla’s visit affirms a recent article about the Philippines that appeared in Ireland’s leading newspaper, The Irish Times.

According to the broadsheet based in Dublin, the Philippines is the “country to explore” in 2011. It cited the country’s pristine beaches and first-class diving sites as main reasons.

With Abadilla here are Liz McKeon, director of clinical services, TLC West Ltd., Dublin; Amanda O’Sullivan, business executive, TLC Group Ltd.; Michael Fetherston, TLC Group president; Rose Stanley of TLC West Ltd.; Vanna Lim from the Philippine Embassy in Dublin; and Tania Spelman of TLC West Ltd.

In an article published in The Irish Times’ January 8, 2011 weekend supplement entitled “What’s Hot for 2011,” writer Alanna Gallagher was all praises for two “stand-out yet accessible” tourist attractions to visit in the Philippines – Boracay and Cebu.

“(Boracay and Cebu) offer first-class diving and beaches like Thailand had 20 or 30 years ago before it was over-developed,” Gallagher’s article read.

With these distinctions, aside from many other more tourist attractions to see and experience, Gallagher says, “the new country to explore in Asia is the Philippines.”

The Irish Times, which was established in 1859, is Ireland’s quality daily newspaper with news reports coming from throughout Ireland and from a comprehensive network of foreign correspondents, as well as sports and business coverage, features and arts sections, lifestyle, jobs and property./PN
